Neavill's Grove cancels Old Settlers

20th Annual Hispanic Cultural Awareness Day also off

BY MARK CAMPBELL

One of the state oldest festivals — the 135-year-old Neavill's Grove Old Settlers Meeting — has decided to take a year off due to the COVID-19 pandemic that has already claimed the 70th Madison Regatta and the Jefferson County 4-H Fair both in July, Swiss Wine Festival in August and several other summer staples of the Courierarea.

"We just hate it but we just decided to cancel this year at our Grove Meeting on Monday," said the group's president Ginger Sexton. "Everybody is just afraid of the virus. People are still dying. The State Fair is gone, the Jefferson County Fair is gone, the Regatta is gone and now us."

Sexton said the fact that most of the group is older — the most vulnerable age group to the coronavirus — and the likelihood that crowds would be down anyhow, forced the group's hand. She said

Two arrested in attacks with deadly weapons

BY COLLIN OVERTON

A Jennings County woman and a Jefferson County woman were both arrested in connection with alleged attacks involving deadly weapons earlier this week.

The Jennings County woman was charged with attempted murder in the shooting of a man on Tuesday near Paris Crossing.

Jefferson County Sheriff's Deputies arrested Melissa S. Payne, 40, for allegedly shooting a man at a residence in the 5500 block of Dixenford Road near Paris Crossing and Deputy.

Melissa S. Payne

The 911 dispatch received a call around 5 p.m. of a male subject who had been shot. When officers arrived, they found a 40-year-old man suffering from a gunshot wound and began rendering medical aid.

The man's injuries were serious enough for first responders to fly him to University of Louisville Hospital, where he underwent surgery and is recovering, according to the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office.

Shortly after, officers located Payne, the suspect, at a residence in Jennings County and took her into custody. She was charged with

Michigan Road accident shuts down traffic, power

BY COLLIN OVERTON

A property damage accident at the intersection of Michigan Road and Hillcrest Drive left more than 500 homes and businesses without power and shut down traffic on Michigan Hill for close to eight hours Monday, according to Duke Energy and the Madison Police Department.

According to a MPD release, Joshua Browning, 39, of Canaan, was northbound on Michigan Road when his vehicle left the roadway and struck a utility pole. The pole broke into two sections with a section landing on the roadway.

Browning, who was not injured, told officers he lost control when he swerved his vehicle to miss a dog and ran into the pole, according to a report by MPD Capt. Bruce Heaton.

Madison Police were on the scene shortly after 4:30 p.m. with the road blocked between Elmhurst Drive to the south and State Street to the north. Michigan Road southbound through traffic was detoured at State Street while northbound through traffic was forced to turn around at Autumnwood Lane and the Church of Jesus Christ Latter Day Saints.

Madison Police block traffic at the site of an accident that snapped a utility pole, knocking out power to more than 500 Duke Energy customers and blocking traffic on Michigan Road for several hours Monday afternoon. The driver said he swerved to miss hitting a dog. There were no injuries.

The traffic detours lasted about eight hours and Duke Energy crews worked until about 10 p.m. to install a new pole and repair lines. The accident knocked out power to 526 customers, according to Duke's outage map.

Madison resident Sondra Sharkey was outside her home watching the response with neighbors just a few houses south of the accident scene. She and her neighbors did not hear or see the accident take place, but she did recall seeing the driver's black Chevrolet TrailBlazer driving out of a ditch on Hillcrest Drive after the wreck.

Madison Police were assisted by the City of Madison Street Department.

BZA tables request for RV in Open Space along Vaughn Drive

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison's Board of Zoning Appeals tabled two applications to locate seasonal campers along the Ohio River and approved a third while also finally reaching a decision on a request for a zero line setback that would allow construction of two garages to share a common wall that had been tabled by the board previously.

While the busy, two-hour meeting also included several quickly adopted renewals, the board spent much more time discussing what should and should not be allowed — specifically in terms of seasonal camping and recreational vehicles — in the zone designated as Open Space to the south of Vaughn Drive leading to the Ohio River both in the city limits and the city's buffer zone.

Three requests came before the board to locate seasonal campers along the riverfront with one approved — a conditional use permit by Susan L. Smith to locate a camper on her property zoned agricultural the 1000 block of East Fulton Street — while the other two were tabled.

Humphrey's lasting legacy on Madison music

I talk to a lot of musicians as I write this column, and Madison's unique status as a music town always seems to come up. So I started to wonder — can our rich pool of musical talent be traced back to any kind of single source or genesis?

Over and over I started hearing the name Charlie Humphrey. Dennis O'Neal, with no hesitation, told me, "Oh yeah, it all goes back to Charlie. He taught everybody to play guitar in this town." Rusty Bladen took lessons from Charlie, as did Patter McLaughlin and many others.

When I asked Jimmy Davis if he'd taken lessons he said no, he was more self taught. But then Jimmy said, "You know though, early on there was a guy I used to practice guitar with who was a Charlie student, and I learned a lot from him."

Charlie passed away recently at the age of 94, but his musical influence seems to ripple down through the generations.

Bridge painting, deck work slated for S.R. 56 and S.R. 129

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

An INDOT contractor is scheduled to begin painting the Indian-Kentuck Creek Bridge on S.R. 56 near Brooksburg in Jefferson County this week while another contractor will begin replacing the deck on the bridge over Long Run on S.R. 129 in Switzerland County next week.

The bridge painting project is part of a $1.7 million Indiana Department of Transportation contract in Jefferson, Jennings and Jackson counties.

Crews will install a temporary traffic signal and the road will be reduced to one lane while work is in progress. The contractor, Three Star Painting Inc., expects to be on-site through late June, weather permitting.

Prior to painting, beams and other components are sand-blasted to remove existing rust. The new coat of paint acts as a sealant to protect from water, salt and other chemicals that may cause corrosion.

Crews are expected to finish work on S.R. 7 south of Dupont in the next couple of weeks. Work was recently completed on S.R. 3 over the Muscatatuck River in Vernon and on S.R. 258 over the East Fork White River in Jackson County in April.

Motorists should slow down, use extra caution and drive distraction-free through all work zones. All work is weather dependent.

On Monday, RAM Construction Services plans to begin work on a bridge deck overlay project on S.R. 129 over Long Run in Switzerland County. The bridge is located 2.3 miles north of S.R. 56, north of Vevay.

Start of the $170,000 project is weather permitting and work is expected to be completed by the end of July. During construction the road will be reduced to one lane with temporary traffic signals.

Motorists should slow down, watch for stopped traffic and drive distraction-free through all work zones. All work is weather dependent.

attempted murder, a Level 1 felony, and aggravated battery with a deadly weapon, a Level 2 felony.

She is currently lodged in Jefferson County Jail.

The Jennings County Sheriff's Department, the Department of Child Services, Air Methods air ambulance, the Child Advocacy Center and local first responders also assisted.

Elsewhere, Vittoria R. Workman, 24, Madison, was charged with domestic battery with a deadly weapon, a Level 5 felony and is currently lodged at the Jefferson County Jail.

Sheriff's deputies were dispatched to a domestic violence report at a residence in the 100 block of West Horizon Drive in Madison at about 9:30 p.m. Monday.

After an initial investigation, they determined Workman had intentionally stabbed a 35-year-old man in a domestic confrontation. The man's injuries were not considered life threatening, the sheriff's office said.

Ripley County man shot in altercation near Versailles

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Indiana State Police are investigating a shooting at a rural Ripley County residence Monday that sent a 24-year-old man to the hospital with a gunshot wound.

Troopers with the ISP Versailles post and deputies with the Ripley County Sheriff's Office responded to an address on West County Road 700 South around 4:30 p.m. after receiving information that a male had been shot at the residence.

Officers arrived and found the man suffering from a gunshot wound to his lower body. ISP detectives have determined the shooting resulted from an altercation, but no arrests have been made at this time, Sgt. Stephen Wheelles of ISP Versailles Post said.

Ripley County EMS transported the man to King's Daughters' Hospital in Madison before transferring him to a Louisville area hospital for treatment. The man's injuries were not life-threatening, Wheelles said.

The investigation is ongoing.

A 1972 article about Charlie in Footnotes, the company newsletter of the old US Shoe Co. where Charlie worked, estimated that he'd taught more than 1,000 students in the late '60s and early '70s, and he went on to teach for decades after that!

But there was something special about the way Charlie taught guitar. It was very individual and flexible. Patter McLaughlin is a good example. "Patter plays lead guitar unlike anyone I've ever seen," says Dennis O'Neal. Charlie Humphrey was able to grow Patter's talent, without stifling his original style.

I also read a quote from Donnie Rowlett in a recent Roundabout story where he said Charlie refused to give him lessons. Rowlett had developed his own unique boogie sound and Charlie didn't want to mess it up.

I sat down with Charlie's two daughters, Suetta and Sheila, to get their memories and insight about their father. "It all started in 1966 when a man at the shoe factory asked dad to teach his son guitar. Dad was a player before that, but had never taught. "One thing quickly led to another and pretty soon he was teaching a couple days a week at the old Drake Music Store on Main Street. Funny story about that — when Dad was in high school Mr. Rothert was the band director, and for reasons we were never told, he kicked Dad out of band.

"Decades later Mr. Rothert is running the music store and Dad is teaching guitar lessons in the store and paying rent to Mr. Rothert. Both of us girls worked the counter, signing students in and taking money. He also had a studio in Carrollton where he taught one night a week, plus the two nights at Drakes. If a student couldn't afford the $1.25, Dad would often let them in for free.

"After about 8 years at Drake's Dad moved the lessons to our basement where we lived on Ferry Street. There would always be 10 or more kids down there. He could teach all skill levels at once.

"I still remember how he'd separate the new students. He'd say, make a C chord on the guitar. If they couldn't make any chord, they were a beginner. If they could play a basic chord, they were intermediate. But then he'd ask, can you make a C chord somewhere else on the neck? And if they could, they were advanced.

"Looking back now, I'm just realizing that Dad was working three jobs all those years. Full shifts at the shoe factory, then lessons on weeknights, and then he played with bands most weekends.

"You name it, Dad played there. He played Shipley's every Friday and Saturday night for many years with his uncle Bill Tom on drums and Bob Youngblood on piano. He played fairs, proms, the state hospital, political rallies, radio shows, everywhere.

"But mostly he played clubs like the Elks, the Moose, and the old Nell Rose Lodge. That's where he was playing the night Suetta was born. Mom sent a message that she was in labor but he didn't get it until after the show.

Smith's application on Fulton Street, located just outside the city limits in a mostly undeveloped area zoned agriculture and in the flood plain, was approved for location of a seasonal RV.

The board requested a delay to consult its attorney on the other two applications — a conditional use permit by Richard A. and Ronda L. Stenger to seasonally locate a camp building on a movable frame on their lot at 1410 E. Fulton St. and another by Smith to locate an RV at her property inside the city limits at 926 E. Vaughn Drive.

The board had no basic objections to the Stenger application as long as the structure located at the site is out by Sept. 31 and can be moved in and out quickly in the event of flooding.

The application by Smith drew closer scrutiny due to its location inside the city limits, close proximity to the City of Madison Campground and heavily used riverwalk. Also at issue was the precedent that allowing an RV to set up there might set for other property owners who own land zoned Open Land along the riverfront.

The area of Smith's application, more commonly known over the years as the "Snake Pit" during the annual Madison Regatta, has long served tent campers on race weekend. It's located east of the Milton-Madison Bridge just outside the Regatta's area of control and allows tent camping on the riverfront on race weekend while the Regatta does not.

Smith said a small structure was located on the property several years ago but she had it torn down last fall because it was being frequented by the homeless.

Smith said she was seeking approval to put a camper back in the area this summer — essentially nothing bigger or more than the structure had been in the past — and that she and her family members have been keeping the area mowed and well maintained in recent years.

Kathie Petkovic, owner of the nearby Riverboat Inn, said an area zoned Open Space should be just that and not be open to RVs and other structures that might obstruct the view and aesthetics of the Ohio River for both residents and the tourists that make up one of Madison's biggest industries.

"When I bought the Riverboat Inn I was told that was Open Space," Petkovic said of her 8-acre business overlooking the river from high above the north side of Vaughn Drive. "If you allow them in there with RVs, who is next? There's lots of Open Space on the south side of Vaughn Drive."

Board members noted that when Smith and her family and friends used the area in the past that was before the Madison Riverfront Development Committee had completed construction of the final section of a multi-million riverwalk that now extends from the Madison Heritage Trail on the west to the city campground on the east. Having RVs driving over that structure could be damaging to a project that was decades in the making and now maintained by the city.

Board chairman Scott Baldwin called for a motion to table the request until the board's next meeting on July 13. He said that would allow time to consult with the board's attorney and further access the application.

"I'd like more time to talk this over with our lawyer," Baldwin said. "... especially with the amount of money people have invested in that riverfront. It's a very unique thing."

In other business, the board approved a variance related to property setbacks impacting several property owners in the 200 block of West Second Street. A local Realtor and investor, Pruett filed the application several weeks ago in an effort to put in writing that two homes he is restoring for sale will be allowed to build garages on an adjoining parcel of land he purchased for that purpose as long as they share a common wall.

By being granted a zero setback to share a coming wall and being allowed a setback variance from the edge of those properties, both homes located at 214 and 216 West Second Street will be allowed to build garages that will provide them with valuable off street parking and improve marketability of the homes.

Previously, the board's issue with the request was one of precedence since it was being asked to approve construction projects that have not yet been proposed other than in a general sense that they might want to build garages in the future.

After tabling the application for additional consideration, the board noted that the work done so far in the area has been an asset to the city and adjoining property owners and adding additional off street parking will be beneficial to not only the property owners but their neighbors, too.

After a 10-minute recess to better define the motion, the application was approved with stipulations that the variances be part of the deeds and signed off on by adjoining property owners. The two properties will be allowed a zero setback between their common-wall garages and a variance allowing the minimum setback on property lines to the east and west to allow up to a 19-foot wide garage on one property and a 17-foot garage on the other.

In other business, the board also tabled an application to build a garage at 724 E. Rear First Street to serve a property located across an alley that divides that property. The situation was so unique that board members tabled the application for further study.

Former Rebel Mefford wins Indiana Amateur qualifier at Shadowood

Former Southwestern High School standout Hunter Mefford picked up a huge golf win on Tuesday in the Indiana Amateur Qualifier at Shadowood Golf Course in Seymour.

Mefford, a 2019 Southwestern graduate and now sophomore at Purdue Fort Wayne, shot an even-par 72 to win the match by one stroke over Jalen Hodges on Indianapolis.

Former Madison High School golfer Carson Wattenbarger, who played collegiately at Transylvania University, finished tied for 22nd in Indiana PGA Northern Open at the Delaware Country Club in Muncie on Monday.

Wattenbarger, representing the Hillview Country Club in Franklin, shot a one-over 71 to finish four strokes back of the highly-competitive event. John Gordon of Connersville shot a 67 and won a three-way playoff to claim the title.

Another former Madison Cub, Blair Shadday, finished tied for 56th with a five-over 75 in the same event.

Shadday was representing Forest Hills Country Club in Richmond where he is the head professional.

Brown leaves Salem

Former Shawe Memorial High School boys basketball coach Mike Brown has left Salem to take the same position at Crothersville High School.

Brown, who coached Shawe to a 5-20 record during the 2017-18 season, was 25-23 in two seasons at Salem, including 11-12 this past season.

In addition to coaching the Crothersville boys, Brown will also serve as athletics director.

Nussbaum goes from interim to full-time coach at Southwestern

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Southwestern High School spent the last two months interviewing candidates for its boys basketball head coaching job and even handed out an offer. But in the end, the school got the man it wanted from the very beginning.

Zac Nussbaum, who guided the Rebels over their final five games of last season, was named the program's full-time coach at the Southwestern School Board meeting on Monday.

Nussbaum, who also coaches cross country and track and field at the school, initially turned down the boys basketball job when it was offered to him in late March.

But with two months to think about it and a chance to talk with his family, Nussbaum decided to take the job the second time around.

"I figured it was the best thing for the program to see if maybe there was somebody with more experience who was interested in the job," Nussbaum said. "After thinking about it, I decided to go ahead and go for it. I'm excited to get started."

Nussbaum took over the Rebels late last season under difficult circumstances.

Longtime head coach Jerry Bomholt resigned after clashing with some players and Nussbaum coached the team over the final two weeks of the season.

Southwestern went 3-2 over that span and reached the sectional championship game.

As soon as the season ended, the search for a new coach began. If athletics director Tom Scroggins had had his way, the search would have taken just a few hours. But Nussbaum wanted the school to exercise due diligence, just in case a "big name" was out there.

After a round of interviews, Southwestern indeed offered the job to another coach and was close to finalizing the deal when it fell apart. A week later, Nussbaum agreed to take the job.

Zac Nussbaum, who coached Southwestern's boys basketball team on an interim basis late last season, was hired for the full-time job on Monday.

"Zac was never our second choice. He was our first choice all along," Scroggins said. "It shows what kind of guy he is that he wanted what was best for the program first."

The team that Nussbaum takes over is ready to win now.

Despite an early season injury to star forward Matthew Williams, the Rebels still went 17-9 a year ago and return all five of their original starters from that team.

Nussbaum, who has been with the program for several years, knows the team well and knows what kind of season the Rebels are capable of having.

"We have plenty of talent and if we can stay healthy we feel like we can have a great year," Nussbaum said. "We need to defend better. I'm an offensive-minded coach and it's hard for me to admit that, but we need to focus on our defense more. We plan on opening it up on offense, but when you get to the tournament, the defenses tighten up and you have to grind out wins. We had a hard time doing that at times last year."

Williams, who averaged 14.5 points per game in the six games he played before injuring his knee last season will provide a boost to a team that averaged 65 points per contest without him.

Madison Courier Player of the Year Foster Mefford picked up the slack and led the area in scoring at 21.3 points while Austin Kramer averaged 13.5, Billy Eccles chipped in 11.4 and Zach Cole 10.4.

Williams, Mefford and Kramer will all be seniors while Eccles and Cole will be juniors.

Nussbaum said he is confident that the coaching staff will remain essentially intact, although nothing yet is official. He also said he has no plans to stop coaching his other sports now that he's in charge of basketball.

"The plan right now is to coach all three and we'll see how it goes," Nussbaum said. "My wife (Stephanie) is my assistant in track and cross country and I wouldn't be able to do this without her. She's a great assistant coach and would rather be the assistant coach, so I think it's best for our family that I stay the head coach," he added with a laugh.

"We're excited to have Zac in this position. There was never a doubt in my mind that he can be successful," Scroggins said. "When you look at the success that he has had in the other sports, there is no question that he will do a good job. He's always been a basketball coach coaching track and cross country and now he gets to coach basketball too."

In addition to the hiring of Nussbaum, the school also extended the contract of girls basketball coach Devin Brierly, who has gone 34-41 in three seasons.

Both coaches received two-year deals.

AP sources: MLB players cut to 89 games, want prorated money

BY RONALD BLUM
AP BASEBALL WRITER

NEW YORK — Baseball players moved toward teams but remained far apart economically in their latest proposal for starting the pandemic-delayed season, adamant they receive full prorated salaries while offering to cut the regular season to 89 games.

The proposal by the players' association, given to Major League Baseball electronically Tuesday evening without a negotiating session, was detailed to The Associated Press by a pair of people familiar with the negotiations. They spoke on condition of anonymity because no announcements were authorized.

MLB did not appear to view the proposal as productive but made no comment.

MLB has said that absent an agreement it could go ahead with a shorter schedule of perhaps 50 games.

Players made their move one day after management cut its proposed schedule from 82 games to 76.

The union proposed the regular season start July 10 and end Oct. 11 — the day before a possible

Game 7 of the NBA Finals. The union accepted MLB's plan to expand the postseason from 10 teams to as many as 16.

However, if management announces a schedule without an agreement, it would not be able to alter the established post-season format.

The players' plan would have the World Series end in mid-to-late November, and players said they would accept MLB's proposal to have the ability to shift post-season games to neutral sites.

Teams say they fear a second wave of the coronavirus and do not want to extend the World Series past October.

Deputy Commissioner Dan Halem told the union a 76-game schedule could not be staged unless players agreed to a deal by Wednesday.

Players continue to insist on full prorated salaries as specified in the March 26 agreement between the perpetually feuding sides. The deal gave players service time in the event no games are played this year along with a $170 million salary advance.

MLB says that because the season likely would be played in empty ballparks without fans, the absence of gate-related revenue would lead to a loss of $640,000 for each additional game played, a figure the union questions. MLB's proposal would guarantee players 50% of prorated salaries and another 20% if the post-season is completed, and teams would fund a $50 million pool for players' postseason shares even if no or few tickets or sold. MLB also would forgive 20% of the salary advance.

Players had been set to earn about $4 billion in salaries this year before opening day was pushed back from March 26 due to the new coronavirus, and the union's initial economic proposal on May 31 called for a 114-game schedule running through October and salaries totaling $2.8 billion.

The shorter schedule in the new plan lowered the amount to about $2.2 billion.

MLB's offer Monday was for just under $1.3 billion in salaries, but only about $1 billion would be guaranteed. The rest is contingent on the post-season's completion.

Mike Trout and Gerrit Cole, the highest-paid players with $36 million salaries, would get $19,777,778 each under the union's plan.

MLB's offer would guarantee each $8,723,967 with the chance to increase to $12,190,633 apiece if the postseason is completed.

A player at the $563,500 minimum would earn $309,577 under the union plan and up to $244,492 from MLB's offer.

Those at $1 million — about half those on current active rosters — would get $549,383 under the union proposal and up to $389,496 in the MLB formula.

A 50-game schedule with prorated salaries would total just over $1.2 billion and leave Cole and Trout at $11,111,111 each.

Players proposed that $5 million from joint management-union funds be marked toward supporting non-union minor leaguers and social causes.

Players would agree to participate in events such as an offseason All-

Star Game and/or Home Run Derby and to broadcast enhancements such as wearing microphones during games.

The union did not accept management's offer to suspend free-agent compensation this offseason, which would eliminate the qualifying offers that cause some teams to decline to pursue players.

Players accepted MLB's proposal that high-risk players could opt out of this season while receiving salary and service time, but that other players who opt out would not receive salary or service time.

Safe Money

At Risk
By Stephen Dybwad

Every decision you make today, and action you take today, carries an element of risk and offers a potential benefit. It's such an inherent part of life, and we don't even think about it. The only time we think much about risk is when the risk makes us uncomfortable. We tend to measure risk with our level of fear. The things that make us most afraid are judged to be the riskiest things in life. The truth is, our feelings don't determine the risk.

Risk always exists. A risk is definable. A risk is measurable. A risk is manageable. With that in mind, what are the questions you should ask when it comes to assessing the risks associated with your investments? By the way, make no mistake, every investment has some kind of risk associated with it. The most common question I hear is usually some variation of, "How risky is this?" That really isn't an excellent question. Better questions would be, "What kind of risk will I be taking?" and "How does this risk match up with my needs and goals?" Before you ask those questions, it would be a good idea to know some of the kinds of risks that you face.

1. Market Risk. (Principal Risk) This is the risk most people think of when they invest. They are asking, "Can I lose my money?". If your Principal is not guaranteed, then the answer is, "Yes, you can lose your money."

2. Inflation Risk. (Interest Risk) This is the risk that the interest you earn might not keep up with the rising costs of living.

3. Liquidity Risk. (Timing Risk) This is the risk that all your investment might not be able to be converted to cash when you need it.

4. Creditor Risk. (Default Risk) This is the risk that your investment is unable to pay you interest or refund your money. This is not an exhaustive list of every type of risk, but it does represent the bulk of the risk most of us will face with our investments.

Let's see what kind of risk impacts your investments.

- 1. Stocks: Exposure to Market Risk means no guarantee of Principal. There is potential for higher gain, with the potential for higher losses. You could make –or lose –a fortune.
- 2. Mutual Funds: Market Risk again. Just because you spread the risk to more stocks, doesn't mean the threat goes away. More of the same is still the same.
- 3. Bonds: Market Risk (still) with the addition of Creditor Risk. If the bond issuer becomes insolvent, your bond certificates just became tinder for your next campfire.
- 4. CD's: Inflation Risk is the issue here. You won't lose any Principal, but over the long term, if you aren't keeping up with inflation, you're still going broke... safely.
- 5. Real Estate: Liquidity Risk could get in your way. The income might be okay, but if you need to sell quickly and there is no buyer, your options just got ugly.
- 6. Variable Annuities: Market Risk may deplete your account, and limited liquidity may prevent you from getting out all your money in the first few years. There are guarantees and loopholes, but know your timeframe.
- 7. Fixed (and Indexed) Annuities: Liquidity Risk is the issue here as well. You won't lose any Principal, and you may opt for a guaranteed lifetime income, but if you need all your money back in the first few years, it'll cost you.

None of these risks are good or bad, they exist. You need to be able to match the risk with your need. Do you need to save money to make sure you can make a significant purchase in a few years? You probably want to use CDs and money markets. Stocks, bonds, and mutual funds can't guarantee you'll still have all your money when you need it, while real estate and annuities might not give you all the liquidity you want.

Do you have extra money you don't need to provide a secure retirement? You may want to take that money and see what you can do with stocks and mutual funds. Do you need to make sure you won't lose what you've accumulated and have guaranteed lifetime income that can stay ahead of inflation? Annuities are designed for that.

Do you still need to accumulate for retirement, but don't want to risk what you already have? You may want to think about transitioning away from market risk and protect the bulk of your retirement money with indexed annuities.

Here are some thoughts:

1. Risk is part of everything we do, including retirement preparation
2. You can't eliminate risk, but you can choose the type of risk, and manage it.
3. It's more about the kind of risk and not so much about the amount of risk.
4. Know what type of risk you are willing to accept.
5. Beware of the advisor who offers a solution that doesn't match the kind of risk you are ready to take.

Keep asking good questions. I'll be back with more.

the organization will miss the money raised by the annual meeting when it struggles to pay insurance and utilities next winter but the hope is that there is enough cash on hand to weather those months, bounce back with a fundraiser in the spring and the return of the event in the summer of 2021.

The Old Settler’s meeting dates back to 1885 and none of the membership — Sexton said the youngest are in their 70s — can remember a year when the meeting did not take place the last weekend in August. That 135 years of tradition is a bitter pill to swallow.

“We’re devastated,” Sexton said. “We considered all options but this was the safest thing for our members and guests. Most of us are older. I’m 73 and I’m one of the youngest ... we’re going to have to really hustle in the spring to make sure we are back next summer. We all love the Old Grove. We love the tranquility and the fellowship.”

The Old Settlers Meeting wasn’t the only local festival to bow out this week. Although with a fraction of the history, OVO La Casa Amiga’s 20th Annual Hispanic Cultural Awareness Day is annually one of the most colorful and well-attended events of the summer. The group also decided to cancel this year’s event on Sept. 19 for similar reasons.

Centered annually around the historic Broadway Fountain in Madison, the event was always a party of music, dancing, food and fellowship.

“There are so many facets to the festival that are people oriented that it would be impossible to do social distancing and have all the protection in place to truly carry out our purpose of the festival, which is to promote awareness of the diversity of Hispanic Cultures through educational country booths, various dance groups, paid musical entertainment, food from various countries, the physical presences of representatives from our local schools, colleges and public library and social contact with people who talk about culture aspects of the various countries,” said a statement released by the group.

The group plans to be back on Sept. 18, 2021 and make that event “truly special.”

In order to help make that happen, donations for the 2021 event are being accepted in the name of Hispanic Cultural Awareness Day in care of Shirley Kloepper, 2045 Ridgewood Lane, Madison, IN 47250.

THERE IS NOTHING SMALL ABOUT SKIN CANCER’S IMPACT

David Schumacher, MD
General Surgery / Bariatrics

Gilbert Field, DO
General Surgery/Wound Care

While many skin cancers are small in size, there is nothing small about their impact. When left undiagnosed and untreated, skin cancers can be disfiguring and even lethal - especially melanoma.

The good news: when detected early or as pre-cancerous lesions, most skin cancers can be cured and eliminated. If it has been a while since you had a skin cancer check-up, we can help. Our surgeons will identify concerns and arrange for prompt evaluation and follow-up. We can safely provide care. Call today.

We can safely provide skin cancer evaluation and treatment.

Let Us Pause to Honor the Memory of Mrs. Caroline M. Lynch McCauley

Mrs. Caroline M. Lynch McCauley, age 90, of Madison, Indiana entered this life on October 25, 1929 in Madison, Indiana, the loving daughter of Robert Logan Lynch and Rosella Scarff, both of whom preceded her in death. She was the salutatorian for the class of 1948 at Madison High School. After graduation she moved with her mother to Indianapolis where she attended Indianapolis Business School, graduating in 1950. She started her first job after graduation with P.R. Mallory Co. in Indianapolis. She later accepted employment with D.A. Lubricant Co. in Indianapolis. She was united in marriage to Donald L. McCauley in Madison, Indiana on June 13, 1953. This happy union of 67 years was blessed with two daughters, Deborah and Donna and two sons, Daniel and Darrin. Just three months after their wedding, Don was drafted into the U.S. Army and was sent to Germany after his basic training. After a few months apart, they decided that she should go to Germany while he was in service. Since Don was a PFC, they had to live with a German family in a small village near the military post in Schweinfurt. They decided that since they were overseas, they should do some traveling while there. They went to London, England and took a tour of the King's Castle and many other sites in London. On New Year's Eve 1955, they went on a tour of Paris, France where they attended the Folies Bergere, visited Notre Dame Cathedral, and many other sites there. They had plans to visit Italy, but due to her stepfather's death, she had to return to the states to assist her mother. Upon returning to Madison, she went to work for James F. Scott, CPA and worked there until they started their family. She was a member of Prince of Peace Catholic Church and loved spending time with her family. Caroline died on Saturday, June 6, 2020, at 3:34 p.m. at the home of her daughter in Madison, Indiana.

A LOVING FAMILY
Caroline will be missed by her loving husband of 67 years, Donald L. McCauley of Madison, Indiana; her loving daughters, Deborah K. Cross and her husband Chris of Madison, Indiana, Donna M. McCauley and her boy friend, Andy Schafer of Madison, Indiana; her loving sons, Daniel K. McCauley and his wife Susan of Louisville, Kentucky, Darrin J. Looking for a real connection

Dear Annie: Would you happen to know a dating site that isn't crazy expensive and that would allow me to find someone who's not fake? I'm looking to meet someone real, preferably someone who loves animals like I do. I'd appreciate any help you can offer. — Just Me in Germany

Dear Just Me: There are plenty of dating websites that offer free basic memberships and affordable premium memberships, such as OkCupid (which is free to join, and $5.95 per month for six-month premium subscription) and Plenty of Fish (also free to join, with premium memberships available for $5 to $10 a month). Though it's not a dating site, MeetUp.com offers opportunities to meet people who share similar interests, and you might consider volunteering somewhere that allows you to work with animals and meet like-minded folks.

As for verifying whether someone's the real deal, a few practical tips: Look them up on social media; FaceTime, Skype or Zoom with them rather than just messaging; and, of course, always, always meet in a public place.

Dear Annie: I am a 92-year-old lady, and have outlived my child, immediate family and many dear friends. Sadly, I'm writing you after hearing of a 90-year-old friend who tried to commit suicide but was saved.

This friend no longer has family. She has a lot of back pain and age-related problems that most of us get in later years. We are all isolating ourselves due to the pandemic, and sometimes our loneliness is more than we can bear. I'm writing to let people know to please, please remember to call often to these lonely souls or stop by to say, "Hi," or send over a few cookies or a flower from your yard. Just keep in touch to give them a sense of worthiness. I've talked to other elderly persons going through this, and some have admitted crying themselves to sleep at night or just sitting all day doing nothing. Please remind folks to check on the elderly, especially those living alone. — Soon to Be 93

Dear Soon to be 93: This is heartbreaking. I am so sorry to hear that your friend felt such despair that she tried to take her own life. And I'm deeply sorry to hear that you've lost so many, including your child, over the years. Your letter is a powerful reminder to check up on older relatives, friends and neighbors, even if just to say, as the great John Prine put it, "Hello in there." It takes so little effort to pick up the phone, and yet it can mean so much.

Call the Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 1-800-273-8255 for guidance and resources to help your friend.

Charlie the chatterbox

Dear Annie: My neighbor “Charlie” is a chatterbox. He only works part-time and is home for the day by 11 a.m. For most of the afternoon, he hangs out in his front yard, talking to passersby. Anytime I run into him, it turns into a 20-minute-plus rambling conversation about all sorts of topics and people I don’t know. I avoid taking out the trash some nights because I don’t want to get stuck outside talking to him. Sometimes, I peek outside, see he’s not there and think the coast is clear — but then he rushes outside once I do. His family has a motion-activated “smart” security camera on the front of their house that I set off going down my driveway.

I’m not alone in feeling this way about Charlie. Recently, I said hello to my mailman, and he whispered, “I need to get out of here before Charlie gets started.” Charlie really is a nice guy, and I’ve grown fond of him and his family over the past few years that I’ve lived here. And I know his chattiness is not a real problem, only a minor annoyance. But I wish I could keep our conversations to a minimum some days. And I don’t think he’s lonely; they’ve got three generations in one household, so it’s not as though there’s a shortage of people for him to talk to. I’ve tried dropping the usual hints — looking at my phone to check the time — but he just doesn’t get it, and he never pauses long enough for me to say that I need to go. Would it be rude of me to interrupt him? — Ear Off

Dear Ear Off: Dropping hints works fine with people who pick them up. Others need a more direct approach. But direct doesn’t need to mean confrontational. The next time Charlie gets to chatting, give him a warm smile and say: “I really have to get going. I’ll catch you later!” Other variations that will work: “I’m in the middle of chores ...” or “I was just about to make dinner ...” If he bristles at the brush-off, that’s on him. But if he’s such a social butterfly, I have a feeling he won’t mind. He’ll simply alight on his next audience.
